ZONING!!

Law of Paramount Importance to Summer Residents—Efforts to Make a Breach in Its Provisions Unsuccessful—Vigilance Necessary

More, perhaps, than any other ordinance or regulation, the Zoning Law concerns the summer resident. And to a slightly lesser degree the all year round citizen.

State and city have provided for such protective regulations drafted in logical relationship to community development in the best interest of all concerned. In brief, the idea is to have an ordered communal arrangement whereby, as far as possible, manufacturing and residential districts shall be separated and to concentrate at each as far as possible. To that end it has been found advisable both from a business and esthetic standpoint to concentrate the manufacturing center in the thickly settled sections, contiguous to railroads and sea transportation and to segregate the more noxious of these enterprises in secluded districts where their effects will be least apparent.

The paramount consideration and law that should be the basic principle of such an allocation is the greatest good to the greatest number. When a public highway or other improvement is to be made, the preamble and formula reads, "whereas the common convenience and necessity require" that so and so be done.

Such a plan has been adopted for this city after careful study by those on the spot who were best conversant with the situation with the aid and assistance of an expert of wide knowledge and experience in this thing. There was nothing haphazard or hasty about the matter. Rather the contrary.

A number of citizens develop a section either as a permanent or summer residence section or both. No business enterprise has invaded its precincts. It is set aside in the zoning regulations as residential. With this guarantee of protection by the city and relying on the good faith of the municipality, others come in, build and increase its valuation and desirability, adding hundreds of thousands to the taxable valuation.

After all this has been done, some one, perchance a recent comer to the city, sees an opening to put in a filling station or hot dog stand on a piece of land he has bought or leased in the district. So with the intent of bringing all the pull and pressure to bear that he can on the city officials, he puts in a petition to the city to have this law modified into a business district.

To be sincere! To look life in the eyes
With calm, undrooping gaze. Always to mean
The high and truthful thing.—Anon.

A hearing is ordered, counsel is employed, the stock argument being thrust forward with much bathos, "Would you gentlemen deprive my deserving client of the means of getting a livelihood?" and the argument has much weight with those inclined that way, especially those who have an innate feeling against the well-to-do.

Such a plea is easily punctured. It might be asked in rejoinder, though the writer never has heard the comeback, whether there is no spot other than that particular place in the city or country where such an individual may obtain a livelihood or if he is restricted to that particular place. This is a rather wide world.

Again does the common necessity and convenience require it and does it conduce to the greatest good of the greatest number? There are filling stations and lunch stands aplenty within every half mile of any populous community in New England. If not one more additional permit of the kind were granted in this city, there would still be too many. Along Main street alone from Washington street to Dog Hill, there are some 32 eating and lunch places.

If the petition is granted, what happens? Property in this quiet residential district is almost immediately depreciated by the noise of the coming and going at all hours of the night of loud noises and boisterous alcoholic conversations. Those in a position to do so, get out as soon as they can and inevitably the section runs down and depreciates and the city, through the lack of common sense of its officials, loses a substantial sum from its income by the tax route. Further residential development is checked.

If these petitions are refused no one is harmed. There are other avenues of endeavor open to the enterprising. Fortunately such onslaughts aimed at properties in the West Parish, Bass Rocks and Magnolia, have been resisted by the authorities in recent years.

VISIT OF THE CONSTITUTION

Maritime Object Lesson of Patriotism of the Past Attracts Large Throngs—School Children Greatly Impressed

If sailor tales to sailor tunes,
Storm and adventure, heat and cold,
If schooners, islands, and maroons,
And buccaneers, and buried gold,
And all the old romance, retold
Exactly in the ancient way,
Can please, as me they pleased of old,
The wiser youngsters of today,

So be it, and fall on. If not,
If studious youth no longer crave,
Their ancient appetites forgot,
Kingston and Ballantyne the brave,
And Cooper of the wood and wave,
So be it also! And may I
And all my pirates share the grave
Where these, and their creations, lie.
Stevenson, introduction to "Treasure Island."

The Constitution has come and gone. It was a happy thought of the Navy Department to send the historic craft, now restored and renewed for years to come, adventuring down the coast that the people might see this relic of former maritime glory. We understand that this itinerary is to be continued until the principal ports on the Atlantic seaboard have been so visited and then the west or Pacific coast will be similarly cruised.

The inspiring and worth while thing about these visits was the eager enthusiasm of the school children who swarmed over her decks from stem to stern and from taffsail almost to keelson. This was the first time many of them had ever seen a square rigger, not so rare a sight in Gloucester harbor so many years ago. For it is the coming generation we must reach and indoctrinate "exactly in the ancient way."

And it is a pity that the sails could not have been bent and the ship manned by real Gloucestermen, for here, almost alone in any port of this country, can a crew of men capable of handling a square rigger be found who can "reef, hand and steer." What an advertisement for this port were such the case. It could have been done and the ship at least under partial sail make port under canvas as in the old days.

These young people have read the story of the Constitution and her record of forty victories undimmed by a

"GLORY OF THE GARDEN"

From Kipling

NOTE—Essex County sea and countryside never looked as charming, and as verdant as now. The exceptionally prolonged rainy season and morning fogs have contributed to this. New England is Old England in this respect this summer. Everywhere the garden flourishes bright with blossom and bloom. My lady and Judy alike may be seen along the way laboring (that's not the word) lovingly and tenderly among the flower beds. The subject inspired Rudyard Kipling in one of his many fine poems. We quote this excerpt.

Our England is a garden that is full of stately views,
Of borders, beds and shrubberies and lawns and avenues,
With statues on the terraces and peacocks strutting by;
But the glory of the Garden lies in more than meets the eye.

Then seek your job with thankfulness and work till further orders,
If it's only netting strawberries or killing slugs on borders;
And when your back stops aching and your hands begin to harden,
You will find yourself a partner in the Glory of the Garden.

Oh, Adam was a gardener, and God who made him sees
That half a proper gardener's work is done upon his knees;
So when your work is finished, you can wash your hands and pray
For the Glory of the Garden that it may not pass away!
And the Glory of the Garden it shall never pass away!

THE LITTLE THEATRE

The Little Theatre consistently conforms to its reputation for versatility in production and ability, and produced this week a play entirely distinct from anything put on thus far. "Milestones," by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock which took place on Friday and Saturday evenings is a play which in three acts covers three centuries of intriguing romance and family life. Beginning with the romance of John Rhead and Rose Sibley, both admirably done by Charles Edgecomb and Roswell Hawley, who marry against the wishes of Rose's family, the story continues with the same situation arising in three successive generations, each time the objectors to the match forgetting their own experience. An excellent opportunity is furnished by this play. The scenery, costumes, and acting, done well would accomplish a success and an impression that would not be soon forgotten, done poorly they could combine to make a complete and inglorious failure. The Little Theatre made a success of it. The aging of the characters through the acts was excellently done and greatly appreciated by the audience. Patricia Petticolas as Emily Rhead was excellent, and

THE NORTH SHORE THEATRE

When "The Magnificent Lie," Ruth Chatterton's latest starring picture, is shown around the country, audiences will recognize in the leading male role a favorite stock player, Ralph Bellamy, who toured the country before getting the break on the New York stage which has led him to the door of moving picture fame.

In "The Magnificent Lie," which will show at the North Shore Theatre for four days, starting Sunday next, young Bellamy makes his screen bow. As Chatterton's leading man, he steps into a role which should advance him far on the road to stardom. In motion picture circles, he is already considered a "find."

Bellamy, in "The Magnificent Lie," plays the role of a sincere young lumberman, who is duped by Miss Chatterton into believing she is a famous French musical comedy star. Miss Chatterton undertakes the deception on a laughing wager, but the man's sincerity quickly turns her fooling to real love. Then she lacks the courage to disillusion him. Bellamy discovers her true character, and the love which has grown up between them is put to a severe test.

The picture was directed by Barthold Viertel, the celebrated

GLOUCESTER FISHERMAN'S INSTITUTE

A Membership of Nearly 4,000 Includes the Most Unique Club House in the World—Will Conduct Memorial Exercises Sunday Afternoon, August 2

PROBABLY THE MOST UNIQUE club house in the world, perhaps the only one of its kind, is the Gloucester Fishermen's Institute. True, there are Seaman's Bethels—until the revival of the American shipping since the war almost out of commission as seagoing concerns for lack of "true born sailor" patronage—but there is nothing of the bethel characteristic about this club.

It is housed in a four-story brick building of its own in Duncan street, on which there is no mortgage. There is an assembly room, billiard and pool rooms, 27 up-to-date dormitories, lunch case they did not last long, although the coastwise fleet never carried them both before the mast and as cooks.

They come from all quarters of the white world, the bulk from the Maritime provinces, mainly Nova Scotia, with a sprinkling from the Scandinavian countries. It is here that letters are written appraising the home folks of tidings of the wanderer and it is to the chaplain that those at home write for tidings of their loved ones from whom they have not heard for a long period.

All this and much more. The only tensive repairs had been made, there was a visitation and house warming day, during which many, including a good representation of the summer colony, took occasion to make an inspection of these quarters and were enthusiastic over what they saw.

This institution, the largest in membership of any organization in the city by far, came into existence some forty-five years ago. At that time the fisheries were at their zenith, between four and five thousand men sailing from this port. A Scandinavian sailor-chaplain, Rev. Magnus Charlton, came here counter, shower and tub baths, in fact every facility these men require.

Here many of the men when ashore make headquarters. In an off season when the weather holds their vessels in port, as many as a thousand men per day avail themselves of the privileges of the place.

Gloucester gathers the pick of the seafaring men from the seven seas of the world. I remember during the Russo-Japanese War when the skipper of a fishing craft was a Russian born and one of his best men a Japanese, and they got along in perfect harmony, but these races are a rarity. I have never known a colored man to ship on the Gloucester fleet. If such has been the requisite for admission to this club is that one is a bona-fide fisherman. That is all. There are no dues.

It may be said that there have come here a good proportion of Portuguese fishermen and in the past decade a representation of the Italians. These may not be seen so numerous in the groupings at the institute but a number of these elements avail themselves of its privileges. The southern races, on the whole, prefer to keep by themselves socially.

Recently the building was put out of commission in its upper section when the police building adjoining was damaged by a fire which originated in that edifice, and last Wednesday after exand saw the possibilities. He was accorded the free use of vacant rooms farther down in Duncan street and these he fixed up in a modest fashion with a few benches and an organ which had been donated and opened for the work.

At first it met with an indifferent reception, although it attracted a good following. Perhaps it was the religious feature which was made prominent that was responsible for this attitude.

However, the chaplain persevered. He sought the aid of the summer colony, always intensely interested in the fishermen. Concerts and addresses were made at the principal summer hotels and financial assistance solicited.

These appeals met with a ready and substantial response.

A wealthy Magnolia summer resident, Mrs. Maria McClure, came forward and practically secured and paid for the block farther up the street, which much remodeled, is the site of the institute. It was named in her honor, the McClure Institute.

Chaplain Charlton, after about fifteen years' service, retired and his place was taken in succession by Chaplains Roper, Alpheus E. Tuttle, Parsons, and the present incumbent, all of whom proved successful in carrying forward and extending the scope of the work, the sectarian feature, if indeed any such existed, being gradually modified, the institution assuming the nature of a club house pure and simple, although religious services are still conducted.

The present chaplain is Rev. George H. Russell, who during his incumbency of thirteen years, has carried the work to a high level, the institution gaining in attendance and popularity and in firmer foundation. A fisherman is proverbially democratic and independent and resents too much show of authority. So the principle of the government of the place is that enunciated by a wise European statesman who declared that that people was best governed who were least governed.

It is during the winter that the institution functions at its highest. The assembly room is a lively sight as the men are engaged in playing pool or checkers (a favorite game) or some other diversion. The men coming ashore engage a room in the dormitory and thus the undesirable features which accompany some sailors' boarding places are avoided. The baths are liberally patronized, and the chaplain sometimes acts as a banker by placing money in the safe for safe keeping literally, and in many ways in a quiet way many pitfalls formerly placed in the way of the seamen are eliminated. Hot coffee and lunch are available at all times and an atmosphere of good cheer always pervades the institution.

An annual feature sponsored by the institution is the memorial service to those fishermen of the port whose lives have been sacrificed at sea in their dangerous calling. Since the inception of the Gloucester fisheries in 1623, some 8,000 have been so recorded. The first instance of such a loss off this coast was in 1630 when a passenger to the colony, while engaged in catching mackerel over the side of his craft which was approaching shore, fell overboard and was drowned.

In recent years the terrible toll of life and property from loss at sea has been happily minimized, in fact practically eliminated, by the improved models of fishing craft, abandonment of dangerous methods of fishing, especially the group fishing of the "two-hooker" days in winter on Georges and the use of the oil auxiliary engine and the curtailment of the use of the dory in fishing on the banks.

Prior to this, heavy were the losses and deep the sorrows when hundreds of these men were drowned in a single gale, casting the town into deep mourning. The Lord's Day gale of August, 1873, in the North Bay or Bay St. Lawrence took a toll of 14 vessels of the mackerel fleets and 252 of our fishermen. It was then the custom to take small boys aboard these craft during the school vacation. The writer well remembers this gale, being in the thick of it. Then the heavens literally opened and the floodgates broke loose and descended. Nothing could withstand its force. Vessels were cast ashore from Canso to North Cape. Many a boy playmate in the fleet was among the missing and never returned. Some of the finest skippers and men that ever sailed around Eastern Point went down in that gale. Long was it remembered here.

A feature in which Chaplain Russell has been especially active has been the placing of old and friendless fishermen (can this be said to be so when they had so great a friend as Chaplain Russell?) in the Sailors' Snug Harbor at Staten Island. During his incumbency some 250 old Gloucester fishermen who had seen their best days as fishermen and were stranded upon the lee shore of adversity in their old age have been provided with a good home in their declining years. Previous to that, fishermen were not received at Snug Harbor.

An impressive ceremony and perhaps the only one observed in this country, originated here, is the service in memory of the drowned under the auspices of the institute. It always attracts a sympathetic and reverent assemblage.

This year it will be held tomorrow Sunday, August 2, in the afternoon. The gathering will march from the Community House in Angle street, accompanied by a band, to the Fisherman's memorial monument on the Stacy Esplanade, Western avenue, where a stop will be made during which Capt. John A. MacKinnon, past president of and representing the Master Mariners' Association, will deposit a wreath at the base.

Reforming, the procession will take up the line of march to the Cut Bridge, the exercises of the day being held at the entrance of the Blynman Canal where it enters the harbor. Chaplain Russell will have direction of the exercises. There will be singing by a selected group and the assemblage, and Rev. Clarence J. Cowing, pastor of the Independent Christian (Universalist) Church will deliver the address. The list of the drowned for the year will be read, taps will be sounded, and the Boy and Girl Scouts will strew the water of the bay with flowers as a floral tribute to the brave. Donations of flowers for this purpose will be thankfully received by Chaplain Russell at the Institute.

TO MY LADY IN SEARCH OF THE DISTINCTIVE MAGNOLIA

MAGNOLIA

HERE WE ARE into August. Midsummer. A little more than four weeks to Labor Day. Verily Tempus Fugit. August always has been a big month numerically speaking on Cape Ann and the years have been so rare that we cannot recall an instance when the hotels have not at least been comfortably filled during the eighth period of the year. The season to date has just jogged along one rainy day after another. We are due for sunshine and a fine fall.

Years ago there was talk of a breakwater from Lobster lane across the reef to Kettle Island. This accomplished, a fine sheltered harbor for boats would be afforded—just the thing for yachtsmen. If such a project were accomplished, it would give Magnolia a great boost ahead and perhaps a yacht club might be started.

The largest and most brilliant group of the season were gathered on last Saturday night within the walls of Del Monte's beautiful Moorish casino. Gorgeous gowns, women's laughter, masculine voices, delicate perfumes, burning cigarettes, steaming exotic dishes, and above all the tantalizing strains of the far-famed Ruby Newman's band, all combined to produce the inimitable atmosphere for which Del Monte's is so famous. The prestige of Del Monte's, enhanced by the presence of so many of the elite of the North Shore at all times, continues to attract more and more of those discriminating in their choice of entertainment.

Among those entertaining were: Mrs. Harry Brown, who is staying at the Oceanside with a party of nine, among whom were Senator David I. Walsh, Mrs. Jacob Loose, Gen. and Mrs. Logan, Col. Backworth, Mr. and Mrs. Greene, and E. H. Brainard; Miss Suffer of Bass Rocks, party of ten; Mrs. John Flint of Manchester, party of four, including Mr. and Mrs. William Martin and Ruth and Robert Martin; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Woods of Hamilton, party of six; Mr. and Mrs. John Amory and Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy of Manchester; John Sherman of the Ritz-Carlton, party of twelve; George E.

Schanck of Magnolia, party of eight; Samuel Felton of Manchester, party of twenty-five; P. M. Tucker, Jr., of Eastern Point, party of ten; Mr. and Mrs. James J. Phelan and family of Manchester; E. B. Kitfield, party of eight; John Favorite of Bass Rocks, party of eight; George Brown of Swampscott, party of ten; John Morrill of Manchester, party of twelve; Thomas A. J. Johnson of Magnolia, party of eight.

Among the recent arrivals at the North Shore Inn are included the Misses Jane and Mary Comisky, Troy; Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Jacobson, Montreal; Martha Podison, Portchester.

The Inn continues to draw week-enders and this past week was host to the following: Mrs. George Fitts and daughter Ruth, Everett; A. L. Tisch, Brighton; Mrs. R. Finn and daughter, E. J. Pearson, Cambridge; C. A. Mulligan and Arthur McKaig, Battle Creek, both of whom are taking special courses at Harvard.

Mrs. Susan H. Lawrence, manager of the Inn, has as her guest, Mrs. Cora Fickling of New York City, who will act as social hostess, teaching contract and auction bridge, arranging parties and assisting in the production of several entertainments scheduled throughout the season, among which is the lecture to be delivered by L. S. Baker, F.C.G.S., on India, Burma, etc. Moving picture and puppeteer reviews are among the various programs arranged for the enjoyment of the guests.

Malcolm G. Stewart and Louis Ledgewood, while en route to Mathew Bartlett's of Beverly Farms, stopped to enjoy the hospitality of the Inn. Other guests included: Marguerite Water, New York City; Mrs. Francis J. Dewes, Chicago, and sister, Mrs. L. R. Reibe of Brookline; Alice Tinkham and Mrs. M. E. ## Notice to Water Takers

THE EMERGENCY RESTRICTIONS imposed on the use of water last season on account of scarcity are removed. The usual rules are now in force.

The Water Board is pleased to announce that the Alewife Brook Water Basin, begun last summer, was completed in January and was filled to capacity within two months. While there is ample supply in storage in the four water basins, the Board wishes to caution against needless waste.

The Board takes this opportunity to express its thanks to the summer residents and citizens for their very general response to their request for economy in the use of water. This co-operation materially helped a very serious situation.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph White and four children are at the Folly Cove Inn for the month of August.

BASS ROCKS

THE BASS ROCKS Golf Club continues its activity as the most popular place of entertainment at Bass Rocks. The usual Monday bridge was held the first of the week and attended by a particularly large number. At the Women's golf tournament on Tuesday, Mrs. Richardson of New York again came in first.

On Wednesday, Mrs. George Butts of Washington, who is stopping at the Moorland, gave a delightful luncheon for a group of her friends at the club. Mrs. Prentice, also from Washington, who is staying at the Thorwald, gave on Wednesday at the club a delightful luncheon at the club.

Mrs. James Prentice from Baltimore, who is at her cottage on Beach road again this summer, entertained recently at the club several friends at a bridge and tea.

On Friday, Mrs. Goetsinger of Pittsburgh entertained a few friends at luncheon at the club.

Mrs. Belvedere Brooks of Montreal, who is spending the season at the Moorland, gave a luncheon at the club on Saturday.

A charming bridge and tea was also held on Saturday by Mrs. De Camp.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Fuller, of Worcester are entertaining at their Bass Rocks home, "Krossanes," Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hallock and son Robert P. of Worcester. Week-end guests have been Clara S. Flagg of Somerville and Mrs. George F. Leavitt and Mrs. James Kindred of Worcester.

LAST OF HER RACE ON CAPE ANN

Hattie Johnson of West Parish, Lone Occupant of Old Freeman House, Has Passed On

An event of historical importance occurred last week in the death at West Gloucester of Hattie Johnson, for the past 20 years occupant of the well known Freeman house at West Gloucester, one of the four houses with the overhanging second story on Cape Ann, the house being a landmark to all passersby.

She was in her 81st year and was the daughter of Charles Freeman, a well known figure of a generation ago. They were last of the Colonial colored population on the cape. Just prior to the Revolution there was an extensive negro population on the cape, the census disclosing at that time that one in ten of the population of the town was colored. The fact was that slave labor was a common thing among the wealthy of the town and that Col. Peter Coffin, original owner of the farm surrounding the Coffin's Beach sector, carried on his extensive plantation there with slave labor and these blacks constituted quite a factor in repulsing the attack of a British landing party from a sloop of war in August 5, 1775.

The cold truth is that a considerable part of the "foreign commerce" of that day consisted in running "wool and ivory" from the gold coast, a highly profitable industry. It was the complaint of the Southerners just prior to the Civil War that the Yankees ran their niggers across and sold them South and later became rampant abolitionists seeking to make them free, which plaint had a certain measure of truth.

You can't hook up much of this trade with any certain port as, like rum running or smuggling, official or family record is nil, those concerned of succeeding generations, honest and upright citizens, preferring to let this episode (Continued on page 14)

EASTERN POINT

ALL NEXT WEEK the yachtsmen will be at Marblehead for the open races to be sailed there. Practically all the young people of the locality interested in yachting will be in attendance.

Miss May Murray Kay, sister of Mrs. John W. Prentiss, is a guest at "Blighty" for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Leonard, Jr., and daughter Isabel Jane have arrived at the home of their father, Arthur G. Leonard, "Druimteac," at the end of the point. The children of the Leonard family were among the many from the summer colony in this section who have visited the Constitution under escort of Mr. Carleton W. Swift, and have been quite thrilled at the opportunity to inspect thoroughly, almost from deck to keelson, that historic craft.

The children of the Raymond family have also been among those who have given the ship a thorough inspection and scrutiny. Young Jock Raymond, growing now into a fine lad, may claim to be the original Old Ironsides admirer of the Point. As proof we point to the fact that his ship in the Eastern Club's junior classes bears that classic marine designation.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Bennett of Englewood, N. J., are occupying their summer home in Ledge road. Their son Lloyd is at present enjoying life on one of the dude ranches of the West.

Peter Vosburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Vosburgh of Cambridge, who are occupying one of the Delphine cottages, is one of the crew of the "Skal," the smallest boat in the fleet which sailed from Newport July 4. The race was completed last week, the "Skal" being second boat to arrive.

The hospitality of Mrs. Clarence E. Birdseye makes it possible for the Gloucester branch of the American Red Cross to announce a benefit bridge to be held at her home Wednesday afternoon, August 5. The needs for assistance from the Red Cross have been

MORE LIVELY and interesting in its activity than ever before, Rockport continues to attract not only large numbers of hotel guests, but an extra large number of cottagers as well. And each week-end it becomes more difficult to wend one's way among the many cars parked and moving which fill the streets, disconcerting evidence of the popularity with transients of this quaint little town.

At Turk's Head Inn recent arrivals include: Robert M. Boyden, Watertown; Margaret R. Moynhan, Brockton; James L. Buckley, Lynn; Grace Tweedy, Danbury; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kip, Mrs. James E. Macher, New London; Florence J. Learned, Pittsfield; Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Vose, N. M. Vose, Jr., Providence; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mayer, Newport; Mrs. Mary D. Womack, Geoffrey Wardell, Edgar Barrier, Lilian Wiles, Mr. and Mrs. M. Findlay, Mr. and Mrs. William X. Ryn, Gertrude Watson, New York City; Mrs. B. A. Courroy, Montreal; Mrs. John Coon, Cleveland.

At Straitsmouth Inn this season there has been an unusually large number of guests from Indianapolis. The Misses Josephine, Mary Y., and Anna Belle Johnson, arriving early in June at the Inn, are spending another long season here, while Miss Lillian Reeves, Miss Emma Byfield, and Mrs. John J. Appel, also from that city have recently arrived for the remainder of the season. Several other guests have returned to the West after an enjoyable month's vacation at this beautifully located and popular hotel.

Among recent arrivals at the Inn are: Mrs. F. E. Tomlinson, Boston; Miss Edith M. Harper and son William, Waban; Ethel M. Colby, Mrs. A. J. Ward, W. G. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Emery, Brookline; Miss Buckley, Auburndale; Marion A. Dogherty, Louise M. Chamberlaine, Cambridge; Mrs. J. A. Linton, Winchester; Mrs. Homer Davis, Mrs. W. P. Linton, Arlington; Edith M. Graham, Mrs. Ida Burkinshaw, Philadelphia; Edna and Virginia O'Malley, Brooklyn; Dr. Edward J. Ell, Robert Burner, Newark; Jane Hensler, Summit.

At the Edward recent arrivals include: J. H. and W. T. Goon, Harvard University student.

Francis J. O'Brien, the Harvard football star, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. R. Russell Smith, at her summer home on the point, "Sidelight."

Mrs. Hector W. Carveth of Niagara Falls is at her summer home. Miss Henrietta Farnum of Augusta, Me., recently entertained a party of fourteen young people, concluding with a theatre party in her honor.

Miss Julianna Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Russell Smith, entertained some twenty of her young friends in the summer colony in honor of Miss Henrietta Farnum.

Mr. and Mrs. Pangborn and daughter Eleanor and son Mark of Minneapolis are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Jelliff at their summer home, "The Ledges," Norwood's Heights.

Col. and Mrs. James Barnes of Princeton, N. J., are the guests of Mrs. Barnes' mother, Mrs. David Stevens of Boston, whose summer home is in Arlington street.

Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Brown departed this week for Bar Harbor, where she is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Augustus Thorndike. After concluding her visit there, she will go on to Sorrento for a stay with Miss Lelia Mechlin of Washington. Miss Mechlin it will be recalled, was a guest for several seasons at the Harbor View, East Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Distler of Baltimore motored on from Baltimore via the Catskills, Adirondacks, and into Canada and down New England to Annisquam, where they are the guests of Mrs. Distler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Wise Wood, at their home, "Sheeprocks," on the crest of the Annisquam ridge.

Mrs. F. B. Whittemore of New York City has arrived at her Cambridge avenue cottage.

Miss Cora E. Vawter has returned from Michigan and is again at her Chester square cottage.

Miss Geraldine Smith entertained the officers of the Constitution at dinner at the club house Saturday evening, afterwards attending the theatricals at Rockport.

EMBROIDERY SALE

Greek embroideries, made by the women of Athens, will be on exhibition and sale at the F. C. Poole Shops, Sawyer homestead, Freshwater Cove, next week, August 3, 4, 5 and 6. The sale is under the auspices of the Near East Relief and Miss Priscilla Capps.

heavy, making additional funds imperative. The offer of Mrs. Birdseye is appreciated and it is expected that a substantial sum will be realized. The Birdseye home, completed this summer, has one of the most delightful locations on Eastern Point.

Rt. Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander and Mrs. Rhinelander, whose summer home is at Eastern Point, sailed recently on the Berengaria for Europe, where they will visit in England and France.

Rev. James A. Muller of Cambridge has been conducting Episcopal services at the Hawthorne Inn during July.

MY LADY GOES SHOPPING

Peggy awoke the next morning with that vague feeling, familiar to most all of us that something important had happened or was about to happen. Gradually the sleepy stupor was replaced by a confused jumble of anticipated events. Those beautiful pieces of upholstered furniture that she had ordered from Poole's would be coming today, those custom-made lovely wing-back chairs and arm chairs so perfect in appearance and so luxuriously, surprisingly comfortable. The men from the Gloucester Electric Co. with those new fixtures for the living room might come today, too. And she had seen Pattillo about the draperies—the beautiful tapestries she had decided on finally, wasn't it, or had it been the damask? Oh well, it was nice to lie here and not worry about anything. And yet, was she forgetting something? The vague uneasiness remained, and suddenly she was wide awake and sitting bolt upright in bed. Bud! Peggy jumped up and slipped into the new negligee of blue brocaded satin that she had recently bought at Manahan's and ran to the window. It was a cold wet day, and Peggy was thankful for the obscure albatross lining in the negligee as she perched on the edge of the bed and called Anne on the phone for further news of Bud. Although Anne was as completely in the dark as Peggy, she readily consented to come over and discuss the matter over Peggy's breakfast table (if Peggy didn't mind if she had a dip first). Peggy didn't mind, but thought she was crazy and said so when Anne arrived, dripping wet from rain and ocean and "protected" from the storm by a beautiful, delicate, exquisitely designed coolie coat from the Beach Plum and Bayberry Candle Shop in Rockport.

"You're not only crazy but you're an extravagant, wasteful thing," announced Peggy in dismayed tones, viewing the coolie coat. "That bathing suit will run all over the coat and ruin it and the coat will ruin the bathing suit, and you'll have pneumonia and—"

But Anne was in the kitchen sniffing around the Glenwood Range from the Gloucester Gas Light. "Kybo coffee from the First National Stores," she murmured. "How long before it's done?"

"Anne, I've been talking to you," said Peggy, crossly. "Are you ignoring me by any chance?"

"I am. You know very well that the Cape Ann Laundry and Dry Cleaning Company does every bit of my cleansing work for me. You know their work yourself, and yet you stand there telling me that things are being ruined. For shame! Ooh, does that coffee smell good! And as for pneumonia, do you suppose I haven't been summering at Gloucester for fifty years or more without realizing the efficiency of its drug stores? Trowbridge's, Barker's or Wetherell's would soon take care of me. Peggy, are you planning to starve me to death?"

Peggy laughed and poured the coffee. "Well, weren't you surprised last night?" she exclaimed.

"To tell the truth, Peg, I didn't quite get the thing straight, but I hated to keep asking questions and embarrass Marcia and Phil. That's why I wanted to see you."

"Well, I gathered that Bud was left an orphan when she was about seven years old and was adopted by those two aunts of Jack's as a sort of charge to pay her board by running errands and things like that, and then when she grew older and began to realize her position, she was made to feel more and more like a servant by those two old maids, and being Bud, probably ate her heart out in loneliness and offended pride. Then Jack, you see, used to come down to visit and he naturally was made to think that Bud was a regular servant, and probably treated her as such. That must have killed her. Then when the old women died and Bud was left alone again, Phil's mother, who had always been a friend of Bud's mother and who had always resented the guardians' attitude toward Bud, knowing her for the true aristocrat that she is, could step in and do what she had always wanted to do, take Bud to her own home. So Bud's lived there ever since and was just beginning to be thoroughly happy and accustomed to being a Hastings when bing, she meets Jack again and feels as though she's been deceiving all of us and all that. As though we'd think any the less of her if she had always been a servant. Bud's Bud, and any one would love her."

"But how about Jack?" Annie wanted to know. "Didn't he know that she had been adopted by Phil's mother?"

"Jack was in Europe, and shortly after the adoption, the entire Hastings family moved to Louisiana."

"It's a good story, but you've missed the point," announced Anne.

"Missed the point?" queried Peggy, slightly disconcerted.

"Of course," said Anne, "every one has. But she'll come back, I hope," she added. Then, changing the subject, "Now let's leave this to Phil and Marcia and get Chubby and Gay and Jimmie to go over to Magnolia this morning."

Peggy was sorry, she had to attend to a lot of things at home.

"Now Peg, you know you're dying to go, and you're just being a little stuffy because I won't tell you what I mean, and I don't blame you. If you decide to go, we'll be starting in about an hour," she added.

Needless to say, Peggy gave in and in an hour they were all on their way to Magnolia.

"The first place I want to go is to Mrs. Paige's at the Public Library Art Gallery," announced Gay. "Mother told me that she was opening her shop there this year and thrilled me to death telling me the stories connected with some of the articles she has there on display."

The entire group was completely captivated by the extraordinary collection of fine old things, beautiful needlework, exquisite in its detail and intricacy of design; priceless old real laces, old brass pieces, fine old silver, everything to delight the heart of connoisseur and layman alike. Peggy was entranced by an old paisley shawl, a beautifully rich thing. "It's exactly like one that my grandmother gave to mother as a wedding present," she exclaimed.

Gay was fascinated by a gorgeous shawl of white crepe of the most delicate texture imaginable, which Mrs. Paige told her had been brought from China by a sea captain.

They finally tore themselves away from the fascinating exhibition and went to the Grande Maison de Blanc. Here Peggy was inspired with the idea of presenting Phil and Marcia with something for their anticipated trip to the mountains.

"Not very smart," announced Anne. "They won't be likely to go without Bud."

"But, maybe by that time, Bud will be back," suggested Peggy, not very convincingly.

"That's all right, I think it would be a good idea, Peg," from Chubby. "I'd like one of these motor robes, whether I was going away very soon or not."

And they were lovely. There were robes of all descriptions. Heavy silks and light wools in dull, soft shades for summer, and heavy, soft, luxurious ones for the colder weather. Then there were tric little moire bags containing taffeta pillows for travelling.

"Anyhow, it would be nice to bring something home to them," conceded Anne. "Come on, Peg, pick something out."

So Peggy was happy again and chose a soft light wool of a rich shade of deep red, and the party departed for Manahan's.

"I want to look at negligees like your's, Peg," announced Anne. "And pick a fight with myself for not buying one before you did."

But the display proved to be so wide and varied that it was quite unnecessary for Anne to be the slightest bit envious. Anne pounced on one stunning model in an unusual and gorgeous combination of pink satin, lined with apricot, which was simply cut with a lapelled collar. Another more feminine and more elaborate and dainty negligee was one of apricot crepe de chine with member of their race named Robin. He accumulated enough money to buy his freedom and in the purchase deed it is stated "and Robin is a free man," hence the family name. In just such a manner came many of the Anglo-Saxon names of the present.

Hattie Johnson was the granddaughter of Charles Freeman, her mother marrying Horace Johnson, a Maine black of Colonial times. Hattie was well known and well thought of. She imbibed many of the characteristics of Yankee stock acquired by environment, her conversation and viewpoint being of that order. In fact, one listening to her with eyes shut might well think her a woman of Yankee stock with more than ordinary intelligence and range of reading. And so will vanish from the coming generation the last vestige and reminder of the era of black vassalage on Cape Ann. The oncoming generation will know of it only by reading local history—if indeed the generation of the new comers peopling the New England locality care to take the trouble or are interested in such matters.

All the old families concerned in this business petered out in the second or third generation, some coming to want.

"Vengeance is mine," saith the Lord, "I will repay."

CORINTHIAN Y. C. TRIO WINS JUNIOR CHAMPION- SHIP OF NORTH SHORE

F. Stanton Deland, Jr., W. Gardner Barker, 2d, and James F. Hunnewell, Jr., trio of youths representing the Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead, won the North Shore junior sailing championship by a narrow margin of two points over the Annisquam Yacht Club team, Capt. Horace Bent, Donald Gleason and Benjamin Smith.

The two final races were sailed off Eastern Point Thursday of last week. Max Talbot's Kitmer II led in both, the Pleon crew having that boat in the forenoon, while in the afternoon, Miss Catherine Tappan, Eastern skipper, led in an exciting finish with Corinthian 12 seconds astern and a second ahead of the Sandy Bay crew, which had led the fleet to the weather mark.

The crew of the Eastern Point Club comprised Hastings Gamage, Capt. William G. Brown, 3d, and William J. Little, Jr. The Sandy Bay trio were Myron W. Brenn, Capt. Miss Laura Cooney and John Clark.

JACOB D. COX, JR.'S TERN EASTERN POINT WINNER

EASTERN POINT, July 22—Jacob D. Cox, Jr.'s Tern won today's midweek race of the Eastern Point Yacht Club, sailed in a moderate northwester which flunked out at the finish. Tern led Mrs. Frances Carter's Skeezix by 33 seconds.

In the Triangle class, Bluebill, fifth at the leeward turn, crossed the four leaders on the first hitch on the windward leg. Reaching home, Capt. Bent's Annisquam entry was closely pressed by Black Bess and Injun. Lawrence Brown's Touareg won the Cape

TAJA WINS IN CLASS R IN EASTERN POINT RACE

EASTERN POINT, July 25—The Eastern Point fleet sailed this afternoon in a light southerly breeze, stiffening somewhat shortly after the start, then becoming fluky with soft spots on the water.

The course was windward-lee-ward. Two boats comprised the field in the R class and on the thrashout Taja bested Bonnie Prince two minutes and 35 seconds, but on the run home this margin was shaved down to 21 seconds.

The Sonders got into a merry mixup at the start and had to do it all over again. When they got away, Skeezix had the edge, making a long hitch eastward. Most of the boats worked short tacks in the middle of the route, Hevella going off to westward. Tid IV got to the weather mark 30 seconds ahead of Hevella, which had profited going west, Skeezix being sixth to round. On the beat home Skeezix made up for lost time.

Injun got away to a fine start in the Triangles and rounded the weather mark 32 seconds ahead of Black Bess. There was no change in place coming down home. Most of the Cape Codders ran into a calm pocket on the last of the homeward leg, and Touareg, hindmost boat, bringing up a slant from astern, breezed over the line nearly seven minutes to the good. SKEEZIX AND TRIDENT WIN RACES AT EASTERN POINT

EASTERN POINT, July 26—There was nothing exciting about the race at Eastern Point this afternoon. A light, listless air which died away to a calm and revived at times gave little chance for any worthwhile sailing. What wind there was ranged from south to southeast. The Sonders and the Triangles were sent to the southern mark and return.

The Sonders got away very evenly and Skeezix immediately stepped out in front and led over the route. In the Triangles Trident repeated the performance of Skeezix in the Sonders. The summary:

COMMODORE WIGGIN ANNISQUAM WINNER

Gleason's Idol Leads the Triangles Home

ANNISQUAM, July 25—A moderate southerly breeze, strengthening toward the close, gave fine sailing conditions at Annisquam today.

Commodore Wiggin evened up the score of last Saturday in the 15's, landing a winner, although threatened at the end by Hoorah. Tabasco was first on the reaches to the outer mark. Coming on the wind the breeze began to freshen, the Hoorah pulling close up. Yosan, standing over to Essex, seemed to be in the running, crossing Hoorah's bow, but the advantage was lost, Hoorah retrieving second place.

Francis Gleason won first prize in the Triangles when the odds seemed against him. Sayhia led on both reaches, with Idol astern about a minute.

Coming on the wind, after a few preliminary tacks, the first four stood to starboard, headed for the Lanesville shore. Idol went on her own to the westward toward Essex. At this point the wind stiffened, hauled more to the southwest and lifted Idol right up to windward in a commanding position, which was retained to the end.

John White in the Kittiwake and Ben Smith in the Caterpillar sailed an interesting duel in the Cat division. On the reaches to Plum Cove and across to the inner mark the advantage was with the Caterpillar by a minute and this was retained on the beat home until the first can buoy on the end of the bar was reached. Just off the lighthouse the pair split, Caterpillar going over to port toward the beach under the bar with Kittiwake taking the Squam side. Therein young White was wise, as the tide was setting in and he got its current, being pulled along while the Caterpillar was in still water and lacked this impetus. This advantage netted the Kittiwake nearly two minutes coming down the home stretch in the river, a winner. The summary:

ANNISQUAM, July 26—A moderate southeasterly wind, irregular and streaky, a smooth sea, with Lady Luck taking a hand in the game, were the conditions at Annisquam this afternoon.

THE ZONING ORDINANCES!!

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Notice is hereby given that the Zoning Ordinances of the City of Gloucester have been printed in their entirety and are now ready for distribution at the office of the City Clerk, Allen F. Grant, City Hall. Copies will be mailed on application.

In a general way, all the summer resort areas have been made residential sections only. Six types of districts have been designated, namely: 1, single residence districts; 2, general residence districts; 3, apartment house districts; 4, business districts; 5, light industrial districts; 6, heavy industrial districts.

The ordinances specify in detail the requirements, restrictions, area, regulations, yards and courts, non-conforming uses, district boundaries, accessory uses, automobile services, methods of procedure to obtain building permits, changes, variations, appeals, etc. They are of especial interest to summer resident realty owners.

flared sleeves and front bordered with wide bands of delicate Alencon lace which enchanted Gay, who convinced Jimmie, who bought it. Peggy, meanwhile, was going into raptures over yellow figured crepe de chine pajamas to be worn with the smart matching bolero for lounging or informal wear and without for formal evening wear.

Ovington's was the next stop, and here the new display of pewter was attracting much attention. There was everything one could ever want in pewter. A tea set of a design copied from a very old pattern attracted Peggy's eye, and it was Gay's turn to draw Jimmie away from a very sturdy and handsome cocktail set. Graceful little open dishes for broccoli or asparagus with a depression for a matching sauce-container had practically won over Chubby until suddenly Peggy showed him some silver plate on another table, some very small vegetable dishes which could be converted from one covered dish to two distinct, very nice for serving scrambled eggs or two distinct vegetables for one or two people. Delicately designed silver trays, and a complete set of sterling silver match boxes and individual ash trays for the dinner table had Chubby in a whirl of indecision, until Peggy pointed out that the tiny vegetable dishes were the most unusual, and he had better get them before some one else did.

"What time is it?" asked Chubby as they were leaving Ovington's. "I have some errands in Gloucester before lunch."

"Just 11.30," announced Jimmie. "And that's correct time. Blanchard just repaired my watch for me last week and it runs like a charm. I thought it was ruined. You remember, Gay, I dropped it."

"That day Hagstrom & Company were doing the work on our driveway? I should say I do. By the way, Peggy, they certainly did a wonderful job on your yard and driveway, too, didn't they?"

"I swear by them," announced Peggy. "My yard looks like a different place. That's what made me have so much more done on the interior. And I'm getting some new Heywood-Wakefield Reed Furniture from the North Shore Furniture for my porch, and I'm going to get some of that unpainted furniture from the Gloucester Coal and Lumber Company and paint it for the terrace."

"Lovely!" sighed Gay. "It's funny, if you have one thing done you have to have everything to match it. Jimmie's afraid that if we have Swinson Brothers put in that new tennis court I'll be wanting a new house to go with it."

Jimmie laughed. "I'll probably want one myself if the court looks anything like the one they finished for Chubby last year. What a beauty!"

By this time the group had arrived back in Gloucester, and decided to go right to W. G. Brown's for a sandwich and some coffee before doing whatever errands they had to do. Peggy wanted to get a bob, and Anne and Gay decided to have a manicure while they were waiting for her in Brown's charming beauty parlor.

Chubby and Jimmie both had several errands to do. Chubby, resplendent in dazzling white flannels from Earle O. Phillips' Smart Shop, and Jimmie in white linen knickers and matching sweater and golf hose from the same establishment, left the girls at W. G. Brown's, departing for the Cape Ann National Bank.

"Oh," cried Gay. "I know that husband of mine will forget to get some shoes. Wait just a minute here for me, he might go somewhere else but to Armstrong's!" She rushed out after him, and returned in a few minutes laughing. "They were on their way to Armstrong's right then," she confessed. "Jimmie told me I ought to know by now that he never trades anywhere else for shoes. He doesn't think I give him credit for having any brains at all. This morning I asked him if he was sure that it was L. E. Andrews that he had seen about getting all our yachting hardware. He was furious! L. E. Andrews have just installed a Silent Automatic Oil Furnace, you know, and he thinks he knows them better than I do now."

"You're mean," laughed Peggy, from her perch up in the bobber's chair. "Say, by the way, have you seen Marcia's new Frigidaire from L. E. Smith's? The ice tray enables you to remove one cube at a time or the whole trayful, and the shelves are steel-rail. It's a beauty, too."

"That reminds me," said Gay, "I forgot to remind Jimmie to place an order with the Cape Pond Ice Company. Well, I know that's one thing he'll not get anywhere else, anyhow. Their ice is so nice and pure and clean. You have to be so careful about things like that."

"Let's play a few rounds of miniature golf before we go back, Gay," suggested Anne. "Yes, at the New Miniature Golf Course at East Gloucester," she nodded in answer to Gay's questioning look. "You should learn by now that none of us like to play anywhere else, either."

Gay laughed. "But you're all good," she began, and was suddenly interrupted by the peculiar expression of surprise that had come over Peggy's face. Peggy was facing the door, and Gay, turning around, saw Marcia beaming at them.

"We've found her," she smiled. "I had to find you and tell you. She went back to Mrs. Hastings. She just arrived this noon, and Phil's mother phoned at once, and she's bringing Bud back with her tomorrow. We thought we'd take her to the mountains with us right away in case she might feel strange and embarrassed at first. Jack's downstairs, too. He was up for the first time today and came over to our house. In all the excitement, no one thought to tell Jack about Bud's leaving and so it was quite a shock to him, although of course he understood the reason."

When the boys returned it was a happy and excited Clan that started for the East Gloucester Course. Even Gay enjoyed playing and had almost as low a score as Anne's, which was quite a lot for Gay, and the bright course seemed even brighter and fresher and prettier in the light of their relief.

"Let's celebrate tonight!" cried Gay. "We can do millions of things. Let's go back to Towle's for one of his special delicious suppers, then let's go to the North Shore, there's a perfect show, and it's continuous, so we can go as early as we like, then let's go over and wind up with a perfect time at Del Monte's, dancing to Ruby Newman's orchestra!"

"And the Gloucester National Bank suddenly closed its doors," sadly stated Chubby.

"I think I've been very moderate," pouted Gay. "There are a lot more things I could have suggested."

"If we only had the time," lamented Jimmie, winking at Chubby.

"No, I think it's a perfect idea, really, Gay, let's go!" said Phil, and they all enthusiastically agreed.

The Misses Ruth and Leah Babson are spending the summer at their cottage at Haven avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mason and daughters Elizabeth and Audrey, of Springfield, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mansfield of Granite street.

Miss Leila Usher who has been spending the winter at St. Augustine, Fla., has opened her studio on Union lane.

Miss Elizabeth Curtis of New York City and Miss Florence Choate are stopping with Mrs. Clyde Bathurst of Granite street. Miss Choate and Miss Curtis are writers and their recently published book, "Pinafore in Pantalottes" has been chosen as the book of the month by the Junior Literary Guild of New York.

Selectman Ralph T. Parker has requested the Bay State Dredging Company to put two of the old moorings which are of historical value on the piers instead of dumping them at sea. These moorings weigh between 10 and 15 tons and used to be used as moorings for the old Pinky boats.

Some of the leading Rockport citizens and summer guests are arranging for a twilight singing of hymns on Bearskin Neck next Sunday evening at 7.45 o'clock. The Negro Vesper Male Quartette will be there and give selections of negro spirituals. These students are professionals. If stormy, the concert will be held in the Congregational vestry.

single defeat. Now the youngest child of them will always carry this remembrance to his or her dying day when they were aboard this ship of glorious record than which there is no other ship in the world save Nelson's flagship Victory so renowned. It will, as Mayor Parker said, stimulate anew a waning and dim historic sense and revive patriotic evaluations. No emasculated pacifism for them.

Perhaps nowhere on the coast will such a significant welcome come to the craft as she enters any port as was vouchsafed when she entered the harbor, a week ago Thursday. From the embrasures of Stage Fort, the oldest in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, a going concern for the time, restored last year by the D. A. R., belched forth a salute in true naval and military style. It was a sight that thrilled many and will never be forgotten. Napoleon told his troops when he had reached the base of the pyramids in his abortive Egyptian campaign, "Forty centuries look down on you." Not quite as long a time as that, but more than three centuries from the old fort saluted the oldest century old ship of the American navy. Pity a moving picture man could not have preserved this scene.

Too bad some one did not think to get out a small pamphlet and pass it around, containing a brief history of the craft. For there was a tale. The youngsters have read of pirates and sea fights from "Cooper, Kingston and Ballyntine the brave." Now they were on the historic craft that brought the proud Dey of Algiers and the Tripolitan pirates to book, the ship where men bared to the waist, had for hours maneuvered for the weather gauge of battle and never tasted the bitter dregs of defeat.

Well, Gloucester has seen them all.

The historic Kearsarge, the immortal Gloucester at Santiago, and to complete the trinity, the Constitution.

A parting word: It's a proud title now to be called a Gloucesterman. No one rates it save he who by ancestry or performance in blue water in the merchant service or on the fishing banks has earned the title, and has not been found wanting in the crises. They may be found aplenty at the Master Mariners' or the Fisherman's Institute. The name has not been lightly earned. It should not be lightly bestowed.

ZONING!!

The latest effort was to extend the business district at Lexington avenue south of Hesperus avenue to the sea. The district had previously been zoned as a shop keeping place as far as this avenue. Beyond, some of the finest estates on the North Shore have been built. For the past three years and especially during last winter, several hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in improving these, the owners relying on the good faith of the Municipal Council to uphold the zoning laws. Despite a strong effort to break down the law and extend the district, the council refused. Had it not done so, it is the unanimous opinion of those who know that it would have meant the beginning of the end of Magnolia as a desirable summer residence locality. Almost as a whole, the permanent as well as the summer element opposed it. That it was unnecessary is evidenced from the fact that the avenue is already over-shopped with stores unrented, and the best interest of those business houses already established there demands that the present barriers be maintained. Converting desirable summer residences into business establishments has not proved profitable at Magnolia the past twenty-five years. The forced removal of fifty wealthy families, very desirable clients of local tradespeople, has not been profitable financially for the people of the district.

These attempts have not been confined to any one locality. Bass Rocks, Eastern Point, West Gloucester, and other sections have been shining marks at which to shoot, and remain so. If the various summer resort protective associations should amalgamate into one big association, especially to combat these raids, a powerful agency would be brought into play to checkmate such efforts. All for one and one for all.

McKEAN'S OH YEAH WINS YACHT RACE AT MANCHESTER

MANCHESTER, July 28 — The fourth in the series of Tuesday races in competition for the Forbes Cup, offered by Mrs. William Hooper, was sailed today by nine of the boats in the 15-foot class of the Manchester Yacht Club. Oh Yeah was the winner, beating the Arlin by a minute and 42 seconds.

NORTH SHORE THEATRE

European director and playwright.
"The Public Defender."

He is a man of deep mystery, a public avenger, sworn to right wrong no matter what the cost.

The innocent have cause to admire him because he is a modern impersonation of Robin Hood—romantically mysterious—the thief and absconder hate him murderously; and the police, jealous of his activities, are after him.

This is the novel characterization portrayed by Richard Dix in his new starring vehicle, "The Public Defender," at the North Shore Theatre, Thursday, Friday, Saturday.

The film is based on the supposition that there are two kinds of laws, one for the poor man and another for the rich.

To equalize this law and to prevent rich swindlers from mulcting the public, Dix assumes the character of a private enforcer of the basic law which declares all men equal under the Constitution.

A beautiful romance has been woven through the story in which Dix rescues a girl from the shame of her father who has been accused of a bank crime which he did not commit.

Others in the cast are Shirley Grey, Purnell Pratt, Alan Roscoe, Nella Walker, Ruth Weston, Boris Karloff, Paul Horst and Edmund Breese.

THE LITTLE THEATRE

Martin Jurow, who played Samuel Sibley, showed sympathy and talent in his interpretation. Eleanor Herbert as Gertrude Rhead showed great ability in her presentation.

Next week the little Theatre puts on "Mr. Prim Passes By," filmed by J. A. Milne.

ROCKPORT ART ASSOCIATION

The Rockport Art Association is creating quite a sensation this summer with its unusual amount of activity and social life. Through its entertainment committee, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Mary Thayer, the association is presenting a program in the gallery that has been unequalled in past years. Every Saturday night under the direction of Mrs. Hal Ross Perrigard, a delightful dance is held in the gallery. On July 23, a charming bridge party was held by the association at which a dainty light lunch was served. Those who attended will be pleased to hear that another identical bridge will occur on August 17. For August 2, an "Evening of Music with Mrs. Charles J. Rosenbault" of New York has been scheduled, which event all lovers of music are awaiting.

The weekly tours held by the association are proving to be the greatest success of the season. Each tour takes place on two set dates during the summer, and those who missed the opportunity of taking in each tour during July have a chance to make up for it in August. Rockport citizens as well as summer guests have been more than generous in opening up their homes and assisting the association in every possible way in this interesting and praiseworthy project.

OCEANSIDE THEATRE

On Wednesday, July 22, North Shore society witnessed the very successful "premiere soiree" of Effie Gallows by Claire Spencer which inaugurated the opening of the charming Oceanside Theatre at Magnolia.

The cast, several members of which are experienced and well-known actors fresh from successful winter seasons on Broadway, all showed obviously their experience in their interpretations and presentations, and the story itself was a masterpiece. Strongly reminiscent of a Hardy novel with its unforeseen and depressing combination of overwhelming circumstances, it gripped the audience from start to finish. Miss Pauline Lord as Effie Gallows had of course much to do with convince-ingly conveying the impression of keen and poignant tragedy to her audience, and much praise is due to Mr. Stewart Cheney for the skillful scenic effects which were greatly appreciated by the spectators and contributed in a very large measure to the success of the play.

Among those present were Mrs. Evans Dick, Jr., who is managing director of the new theatre and who greeted arrivals at the door looking very charming in soft figured tan chiffon; Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Buswell, Mrs. Dunbar Lockwood, Mr. and Mrs. Durward Grinstead, Mrs. William Emerson, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Senator David I. Fuller, Misses Mary and Lydia Fuller, Miss Pauline Danforth, Mr. and Mrs. George Dunklee, and Miss Gertrude Sands.

The two children, Harrison and Patricia, of Mrs. O. Harrison Smith, known to the literary world as Claire Spencer, and her husband, O. Harrison Smith, were among the spectators on the opening night.

The second production of the Oceanside Theatre was greeted with much enthusiasm by the distinguished audience. "Second Man," by S. N. Behrman, is a sophisticated comedy done in a sophisticated manner by a sophisticated cast. George Houston as Clark Story, enacted to perfection the part of a third rate writer, superficial in character but captivating and clever, and with whom the young debutante, Monica Grey (played charmingly by Leone Sousa) falls desperately in love. Robert Henderson, as Austin Lowe, a young scientist infatuated with the indifferent Monica, shows skill and ingenuity in his interpretation. Harriet Eels as the wealthy Mrs. Kendall Frayne, consistent winner-out in the Story affections, displays again her versatility and ability in an admirable bit of characterization.

The story is clever, quick moving, and modern, and the lines are equally so. The four characters are excellently cast, the play skillfully produced, and much credit is due to Stewart Cheney, scenic director, for the superbly done setting of the studio apartment of Clark Story, situated on the East Side.

Among those present in the distinguished audience on Monday night were: Mrs. William H. Moore, Mrs. John F. Hill, Mrs. D. M. Binney, Mrs. Russell Codmen, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Woods, Mrs. F. J. Bradley, Mrs. C. D. Sias, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Buswell, Mrs. John C. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Tucker, Mrs. Gardener M. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Alley, Mrs. John C. Howe, Mrs. H. H. Barton, Jr., Mrs. P. L. Stackpole, Mrs. Wadsworth Busk, Mrs. T. B. Beal.

GLOUCESTER SOCIETY OF ARTISTS

The opening of the second exhibition of the season of the Gloucester Society of Artists was inaugurated with a tea on Saturday, July 25, at the Gallery on Eastern Point Road. This exhibition created quite a sensation by its size as compared with those of other years. The first showing was much larger than any ever held previously but this, which will be open on weekdays from seven to six and on Sundays from two to six, contains sixty-four more numbers than the last. It was necessary to enlarge the galleries by having screens made to accommodate the increased number of pictures, and the show is the largest and at the same time the most tastefully arranged that has occurred since the founding of the society in 1922.

On Thursday, August 13, The Gloucester Society of Artists will hold their annual Fakirs' Ball at the Hawthorne Inn Casino, East Gloucester, all in costume assembling first in the gallery at 7.30. Prizes are to be given for costumes appropriate to the theme, two for ladies and two for gentlemen, the first prize being for the most artistic, the second for the most humorous costume. Many tickets have already been sold and many more are promised, fairly good evidence that this year as always, the ball will be a great success.

The Gloucester Society of Artists held a meeting on Tuesday evening, July 21, and elected a hanging committee for the second exhibition of the season, which opened Monday, continuing through August 18, with a reception from 2 to 6 o'clock Monday afternoon. The following members were elected to the hanging committee: Louis F. Berneker, chairman; Gordon Payne, Charles Allan Winter, Elsa Anshutz-Zieg, John J. Barry, Benjamin Cratz, A. W. Schwartz, Helen S. Davis, Nell Van Hook and Gertrude C. Fosdick.

The committee for the annual Fakirs' Ball was also elected at the meeting and includes: Marion T. MacIntosh, chairman; Charles Allan Winter, Mrs. William Jay Little, Maud F. Berneker, Virginia Gruppe, Hildegard Mueller, Carl H. Nordstrom, Lester A. Gillette, Gordon Payne, Ronan J. Prybot, Wilhelmina T. Weyand, J. Eliot Enneking, Charles P. Gruppe, Louis F. Berenker, Juliet Burdoin, Helen S. Davis and Nell Van Hook.

The date for the Fakirs' Ball was set for August 13.

The subject title or theme of the ball this year is to be "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," and the costumes are supposed to be in keeping with the subject, at least to suggest the sea and its creatures.

Prizes will be given for the costumes, those that best express the spirit of the sea in some form and are the most artistic creations to be considered eligible for the prizes.

The jury of awards will consist of members of the executive committee.

The entertainment committee, Mildred Turner Copperman, chairman, announced that on July 30, at 8.30 P.M., a puppet show will be given by Ralph Geddes, who made an extensive tour through the United States last winter and who is a protege of Jean de Gros. The program for the show is to be: "The Little Mermaid," by Hans Christian Andersen with music by Debussy, and "The Comical Tragedy of Punch and Judy."

Those who will pour at the tea Saturday included Mrs. Frances Storrs, Miss Alethea Platt, Miss Elizabeth Grandin, and Miss Lillian Giffen, assisting the chairman of the house committee, Mrs. Antoinette Inglis, who will preside.

THE PHOEBE

A certain little restaurant on Bearskin Neck, Rockport, has a swinging sign which first attracts the eye and then the attention of the passerby. It is an oil painting of a clam against a dramatic background of various sea-suggesting greens. Not being without some curiosity ourselves, we asked the manager about it and this was his story.

"A young and promising artist residing in the neighborhood conceived the idea, and desired a perfect clam for a model. Now a perfect clam like a perfect ruby can be told by its imperfections and after sorting over sixteen to twenty bushels of clams he finally found Phoebe. Phoebe was rather fresh at first and stood up well although the artist was rather exacting."

To make a long story short the sudden transition from an ordinary clam flat to the luxuries of an artist's studio must have spoiled Phoebe for she had to be thrown in the discard after a few days but not before the artist had captured for posterity what a clam-digger would call a "spittin' image." And so she can be seen, swinging to the gentle breezes that waft up and down Bearskin Neck.

BLUE BILL CAPTURES RACE AT GLOUCESTER

reach beam, reach and a beat. The other classes sailed the inshore course, a run to Plum Cove, a reach to the inner mark and a beat home.

When the boats got out of the river, the Triangles Blue Bill and Goblin hit a vagrant puff which enabled them to open up a commanding lead, Scalene and Idol being out of the path of the wind. In consequence the two leaders got to Essex nearly five minutes ahead of the others. On the reach to the outer mark, Goblin passed into the leadership.

On the beat back, Goblin and Blue Bill stood over toward the Essex shore and here streaky wind played favorites with them. Blue Bill's skipper paid off and succeeded in slipping under Goblin's lee, footing faster than his competitor. After several minutes, a shift in the wind jacked Blue Bill to weather and when they came about to starboard Blue Bill was well to the board, which advantage she maintained.

John White of Reading and Anisquam and Ben Smith again had it out in the Cat class and the sailor from the hinterlands again proved himself a competent helmsman. It was a pretty even thing in the reaches to Plum Cove and to the inner mark, with Caterpillar a half-boat length to the good, but on facing the wind, Kittiwake began to go strong and opened up a 2½ minute margin.

Charles Hill in the Sailfish added another win in the Fishboat flotilla. The summary:

ONWARD AND SAN SOUCI EASILY WIN OFF ROCKPORT

ROCKPORT, July 25—At Rockport this afternoon, the wind at the startoff in the Sandy Bay race was a trifle east of south, and light, but hauled to southwest later, with more force.

It was just a run-around in the Pilot class for Laura Cooney in the Onward. The San Souci also was always out of danger in the Stars.

There was stiffer competition in the Sandy Bay class, Myrtie B and Mamie leading on the first and second legs up to the last hitch windward work. Then Bobeno, third boat, made her try and pulled out 46 seconds a winner. The summary:

GOLF AT ROCKPORT

ROCKPORT, July 25—State Senator Joe Monahan of Sandy Burr topped a field of 160 golfers in the two-day Rockport medal play open, concluded today, scoring a 74 to win gross honors by a stroke. Behind him, in a tie for second, were Norman Kellenberger, of Winthrop, and George Sargent, of the home club, with 75s.

Prize winners in Class B, given over to players handicapped at 12 strokes and over, were E. D. Chapman of North Shore and H. B. Wilkinson of Rockport. Chapman led both net and gross scoring with his card of 80—16—64, but on the single prize waiver rule, Wilkinson was awarded the net with 87—25—65.

The long-driving competition, held for the entertainment of the veranda spectators at the first hole, resulted in keen competition with Monahan setting the flag Friday with a wallop of 255 yards, only to have it nudged up 10 more by Jack Healey of Longmeadow today. Chick Grasse, another healthy-hitting Lowell shooter, was in the field today, but couldn't keep close enough to the fairway to take a shot at it.

Monahan's victory was founded on a remarkable stretch of par holes, no less than 14 in the round. He was twice over, taking three from the edge of the fourth and

MRS. WILLS-MOODY WINS FINAL SINGLES

MANCHESTER, July 25 — Mrs. Fred S. Moody, Jr., of San Francisco experienced no difficulty in defeating Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper of Oakland, Calif., in the final singles match of the Essex County Club tennis tournament, this afternoon. The non-ranked queen of the courts allowed the No. 1 ranking player of the country but one game, winning 6—0, 6—1, in 30 minutes of play. It was a disappointing match as Mrs. Harper did not offer the former Helen Wills anything equal to the opposition expected of one who had reached the last round of such a tournament.

While the singles were not interesting, the final of the women's doubles was a very exciting match, Miss Virginia Hilleary of Philadelphia and Miss Dorothy Audrus of Stamford, Conn., winning from Mrs. John A. Van Ryn, formerly Miss Marjorie Gladman of Philadelphia, and Miss Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, Calif., 4—6, 11—9, 6—0. In the mixed -doubles, Miss Marjorie Morrill and Dr. G. Colket Caner of Manchester won a three-set match from Miss Margaret Blake of Lenox, and Richard Harte of Nahant, 4—6, 6—2, 6—1.
